

Sensiques

Natural, scented botanical extracts add fragrance and function to cosmetic applications.

For thousands of years, and across every civilization, natural fragrances have been used in medicine and cosmetics to heal, calm and soothe the senses.

The Chinese burned incense to create harmony and balance. Egyptians infused oils and herbs for medicinal, spiritual and cosmetic use. And Hippocrates used natural scents for both aromatic and medicinal benefit.

Today, the important effect of fragrance on our mind and body is widely recognized.

Fragrance plays a key role in cosmetic formulations as it stirs our emotions and can create instant attraction towards a product.

Our natural scented extracts effectively conceal base odors without the use of additional fragrance, and at higher levels they impart a fresh, natural scent to cosmetic formulations.

With their natural positioning and nomenclature, Sensiques are the ideal solution for fragrancing of naturally positioned products.

The natural fragrance of these extracts imparts aromatherapy benefits as well.

Sensiques Fragranced Naturals

Sensiques are naturally fragranced botanical extracts that work to impart light, fresh scent to cosmetic formulations and to deliver lasting fragrance to the skin.

Extraction & Form

Manufactured using one of several processes, Sensiques extracts are oil soluble, coming either in caprylic/capric triglyceride or coconut oil. A few Sensiques are based on glycols and alcohol, making them suitable for water based systems.

The selection of carrier depends on the intensity of the scent of the natural extract.

Methods of Extraction

- Supercritical fluid (CO₂)
- Solvent extraction
- Distillation
- Expression
- Fermentation

Formulating Guidelines

It is recommended that Sensiques be added at the end of batching, at or near room temperature.

Avoid extreme pH

Recommended Use Level

0.3% - 2%

The Sensiques Difference

Sensiques differ from both essential oils and fragrances in that the INCI name of Sensiques is the name of the botanical extract. So, in a single ingredient, you get both a fragrance and a botanical extract.

While essential oils are made via steam distillation of plants, except in the case of citrus, which are expressed, Sensiques can be made using any of several extraction processes. Additionally, while essential oils contain the whole volatile aromatic component of a plant, Sensiques may contain only specific fractions of essential oils.

Sensiques are fragrance free and offer a wider range of aromatic options than essential oils alone. In fact, many Sensiques extracts have no equivalent essential oil form. Additionally, Sensiques can be used together to create totally unique aromas - making the possibilities endless!

Sensiques	Essential Oils
Can be made by a number of processes, including steam distilling, expression, solvent extraction, supercritical fluid extraction and fermentation	Made by steam distilling plant
May contain fractions of essential oils that are physically separated	Contain the whole volatile aromatic component of the plant
Wide range of scents available, blends can also be made to create tailored scents	Smaller range of available fragrances.
